Artist Diane Edwards' new book, Painting Landscapes of Colorado and the West, is now available. This book is filled with ideas and lessons for painting landscapes using oils and pastels. Edwards' paintings are colorful and infused with the light and drama of Colorado mountain landscapes, North Dakota prairies, and the West. It's a great tool for aspiring landscape artists, whether a beginner or a more advanced painter. This book would also be helpful for teachers of landscape painting in any medium or anyone who is an art enthusiast.

About the Artist

Diane was born in North Dakota to parents who were descendants of Norwegian immigrants. They lived in a Norwegian community in southwestern North Dakota called Daglum. All of her grandparents spoke Norwegian and had a strong family bond. After high school, she attended college and completed her Bachelor of Arts degree. She taught art in junior and senior high for nine years. Later, she earned her Masters Degree in Art and Education and taught painting and drawing at the college level for seven years. She owned a studio and art supply store for twenty-seven years in which she taught many different painting media to adults. Currently, she has her own home studio and teaches painting classes in Fort Collins, Colorado. Teaching painting is so inspiring to her especially when students achieve success in their personal work.
